Texas Highways

Digital Reporting Ad Transparency

TEXAS HIGHWAYS WEBSITE

Advertising on the Texas Highways website is managed and displayed using a paid WordPress plugin called Advanced Ads. The plugin is used by thousands of sites around the world and is responsive to bug fixes and security updates.

Texas Highways staff manually upload and schedule the ads each month. This plugin treats all users equally and displays ads in an evenly rotating fashion. Texas Highways does not display ads based on user interest or past behavior and does not report advertising metrics to anyone but internal staff, sales representatives, and the client.

Reporting:

Impressions and clicks are monitored using Google Analytics 4 (GA4) events. Each time a banner ad is displayed, an impression event is logged in GA4. These events are labeled by the ad that they represent, and at the end of each month, a summary of all impressions is reported to the sales reps. Events are regularly audited using the GA4 DebugView module to ensure impressions fire when ads are displayed.

Clicks are reported using the same technology. Texas Highways invites advertisers to include link parameters, called UTMs, on their provided URLs so clients may have some insight into inbound traffic. Some users may use tracking blockers or other technology which interferes with the behavior of UTMs— for this reason, it is not unusual for click reports and UTM visits to vary slightly.

EMAIL NEWSLETTERS

Email marketing at Texas Highways is managed and sent through Emma by Marigold. Emails are built manually by Texas Highways staff, and ads are placed as 'Image' blocks with links manually inserted.

Reporting:

All reporting is handled by Emma. Texas Highways reports the number of emails sent, the number of unique email opens, and the open rate, as well as ad clicks.

These ad clicks are reported using the Emma "Click Analysis" module. This shows the platform's best understanding of what link was clicked and what copy was clicked to that link—for example, a CTA button labeled 'Visit Us' would point to the same URL as the rest of the ad, but these clicks are tracked separately. Texas Highways reports the total clicks on the URL in aggregate, with more detailed information available upon request.

Texas Highways does not release reports of specific email addresses who clicked on an ad.

It is important to consider the practice known as "server sniffing," where email clients scan the contents of an email to determine if it is legitimate. At times, these spam tests are reported by the Emma platform as clicks, even though they are not legitimate opens or clicks. On June 11, 2024, Emma released a feature tracking 'Non-human interactions' in an effort to reduce the number of bot clicks that appear in the final report. Whenever possible, the Texas Highways staff relies on Emma's report of human engagement and ignores non-human interaction data.

Advertisers are again welcome to include UTMs with their e-newsletter URLs but must consider the likelihood for discrepancy due to tracking blockers or server sniffing.

THANK YOU
